Program Overview – Homeward Bound

Piloted in Toronto by WoodGreen in 2004, Homeward Bound is a highly successful program that helps single, mother-led families, living in shelters, homeless or inadequately housed – often with a history of domestic violence or other trauma – gain important life skills; earn fully funded college diplomas; find employment; transition from poverty to lasting, economic self-sufficiency and well-being; and build new futures. The remarkable success of the program – and the desperate situation of so many families led by single mothers, not only in Toronto but across the country, has inspired our vision – to expand Homeward Bound to the provincial and national levels.

What You Will Do

- Lead the development, implementation and evaluation of a high-quality curriculum and training program directed towards existing and prospective Homeward Bound practitioners for the purpose of learning and accreditation.
- Develop a strong understanding of WoodGreen's Homeward Bound program, the history and evolution of Homeward Bound affiliates across Ontario, and the Homeward Bound growth plan.
- Work closely with staff from WoodGreen's Homeward Bound, Homeward Bound affiliates throughout Ontario, and subject-matter experts to develop a robust knowledge base to support development of the Homeward Bound Practitioner Training curriculum and educational modules.
- Create a range of multimedia materials (e.g., user guides, workbooks, videos, etc.) to support educational goals and learner outcomes.
- Utilize leading-edge theories of adult education and creative learning experiences to build an exciting and engaging classroom experience for professional, adult learners.
- Conduct regular analysis and evaluation of user experience and outcomes to inform continuous improvement of educational products and programs.
- Ensure regular communication and meaningful engagement of partners and key stakeholders throughout project.

What You Bring to the Team

- Minimum University Degree in the field of Education, Social Work, Psychology, or a related discipline.
- Minimum two (2) years of curriculum development experience in relevant roles (e.g., curriculum development position in a university, adult learning institute, or social service delivery organization).

What Will Set You Apart

- Demonstrated experience in designing, developing, and implementing competency-based curriculum and associated materials, including instructor-led materials, job aids, online tutorials, and/or multimedia products.
- Ability to apply principles of adult education, train-the-trainer, and blended learning towards curriculum design and development that suits the diverse needs of adults with a variety of learning styles.
- Demonstrated experience with user engagement and stakeholder research related to development and implementation of educational programming.
- Excellent verbal and written communication skills, including skills in collaborating with stakeholders and subject-matter experts to help write, design, and develop technical content.
- Exceptional organizational skills and high attention to detail – able to plan the necessary time, resources, and materials to support accomplishment of goals and balancing of a complex workload with tight timeframes.
- Strong presentation and public speaking skills, aimed at both internal and external audiences.
- Accountability and adaptability – able to keep projects on track, while adjusting course in a dynamic and changing environment.
- Proficiency with computer software including Microsoft Office programs and online learning software (e.g., Adobe Captivate, Articulate 360, or other LMS).
- Sound understanding of trauma-informed principles and practices.
- Commitment to achieving social justice for vulnerable and marginalized populations.
- Demonstrated experience in front-line client engagement is an asset.
